20th Century British Detective Fiction
General Reading List

This list is by no means exhaustive, but neither is it intended to be prescriptive – you are not expected to read all (or indeed any) of these books. It is firstly for your information. You may wish to use some of these works as general resources, but it is more likely that you'll be using the reading lists given out each week on specific authors, in conjunction with the occasional critical essay we'll be using in seminars.

The list is secondly intended to give you an idea of the variety of critical work that has been produced this century, from the traditional hunt-for-source type scholarship through feminist readings and more. If you're particularly interested in one aspect of detective fiction, I hope that this list will give you a starting point for finding more material after you leave Oxford.

In addition to paper resources, there are now many websites that focus on crime, detective and mystery fiction. These aren't always suitable for research purposes – the material isn't often set out in a format amenable to the degree of scholarly precision adopted by the books below. But they are quite exhaustive, and some of them are even fun! As most sites are hyperlinked to each other, I'll mention just the one – 'A Guide to Classic Mystery and Detection' (http://members.aol.com/MG4273/classics.htm) – which should be the first port of call for any academic cybersleuth.

BIBLIOGRAPHIES, INDEXES and REVIEWS

Oleksiw, Susan, A reader's guide to the classic British mystery (Boston: G.K. Hall, 1988)

Read, Herbert Edward, Sir, Pursuits & verdicts [contemporary reviews] (Edinburgh: Tragara Press, 1983)

CRITICISM

Bailey, Frankie Y., Out of the woodpile : black characters in crime and detective fiction (Contributions to the study of popular culture, 0198-9871, no.27; New York, London: Greenwood, 1991)

Cooper-Clark, Diana, Designs of darkness: interviews with detective novelists (Bowling Green, Ohio: Bowling Green State University Popular Press, 1983)

Henderson, Lesley, Twentieth-century crime and mystery writers (Chicago; London: St. James, 1991)

Herman, Linda, & Stiel, Beth, Corpus delicti of mystery fiction: a guide to the body of the case (Metuchen, N.J: Scarecrow Press, 1974)

Kayman, Martin A., From Bow Street to Baker Street: mystery, detection, and narrative (Basingstoke: Macmillan, 1992)

Priestman, Martin, Detective fiction and literature: the figure on the carpet (Basingstoke: Macmillan, 1990)

Rowland, Susan, From Agatha Christie to Ruth Rendell

Thompson, Jon, Fiction, crime, and empire: clues to modernity and postmodernism (Urbana: University of Illinois Press, 1993)

POSTMODERNISM

Barth, John, The Literature of Exhaustion, in The Friday Book: Essays and other Nonfiction (New York: Putnam's, 1984), 62-76

De Lauretis, Teresa, ‘Gaudy Rose: Eco and Narcissism’, SubStance 47, 13-29 (1985) [on Sayers and Eco]

CRIME IN FICTION

De Quincey, Thomas, 1785-1859, On murder as a fine art (London: Philip Allan, 1925)

Symons, Julian, (Mortal consequences), Bloody murder: from the detective story to the crime novel: a history (London: Faber and Faber, 1972)  [The title of the American publication was Mortal Consequences]