

Beate Neumeier is Professor and chair of English at the University of Cologne, Germany. Her research is in gender, performance, and postcolonial studies. She is the editor of the e-journal Gender Forum and published widely on women's writing, Anglophone drama, contemporary British-Jewish literature, postcolonial literatures and Australian studies. Most recently she edited together with Kay Schaffer, Decolonizing the Landscape: Indigenous cultures in Australia (2014). Together with Dany Adone she organized the DAAD guest chair in Australian Studies (2009-2014), which helped to establish an Australian Studies program at the University of Cologne, and initiated a collaborative research and exchange project with Australian colleagues. In 2015 she set up a network between German universities to develop an online Australian Studies project.