

Computerized information and documentation system, an opportunity for Africa!

Sylvie Grand'Eury-Buron

Over the last few years, Africa has been collecting, saving and enhancing the value of its oral cultural legacy, thanks to new information and communication technology. Thanks to GED systems, they use the radio and the internet to support the recognition and revival of oral tradition. The need for filing and the necessity to have a different typology of data processing depend on the users and on the issues established by governmental bodies. We are thus confronted with similar elements which can be digitalized and typed in GED bases using the GEIDE dynamics.