

Pronominal reference in Harari

Beniam Mitiku

University of Cologne - Germany

This paper discusses the pronominal forms of Harari, a Semitic language spoken in Ethiopia. Its main objective will be to illustrate the various types of bound and free pronominal forms in the language and to describe their morpho-syntactic and semantic nature. In addition, the use of pronouns in the domain of pragmatic discourse will be discussed. Moreover, the paper gives some comparative analysis of the pronominal forms in other Ethio-Semitic languages.